Assignment

1. Read a selected bible portion for 10 or 15 minutes... using a timer to let yourself know when the time is up. You can read anywhere from the bible you want to. I'd suggest the use of a planned approach. For example, read five psalms per day; start with the Psalm corresponding to today's date and then add 30 to that number until you're run out of Psalms to read.
2. Keep a daily journal. Record one verse for each day you have a quiet time from whatever bible passage you read that day. It could be a promise, a command, a description of God's love and character, a warning, or a prayer of complaint or praise. It could be an eye-opening revelation or (more likely) a needed reminder. It might jump off the page at you, or you may have to go digging for something. Whatever the case may be, aim to record one entry for each day you have a quiet time.
3. Pray out loud for 10 or 15 minutes using a timer to let yourself know when the time is up. If need be, use your journal to jump start yourself regarding what or how to pray.
4. Remember ... Trees yield fruit over time - in the presence of a daily mix of nutrition, water and sunlight. So will you. Consistency is key.
